- You may also send your question via chat to either Elizandra Casillas or to all panelists.

Scope of Presentation

1. Stakeholder engagement objectives
2. The 2021-2022 CAISO transmission planning process (TPP) and Out-of-state wind resources
3. Proposed out-of-state transmission projects
4. Proposed approach by the CAISO
5. Questions for stakeholder feedback
6. Next steps / Process timelines
7. Time for Q & A

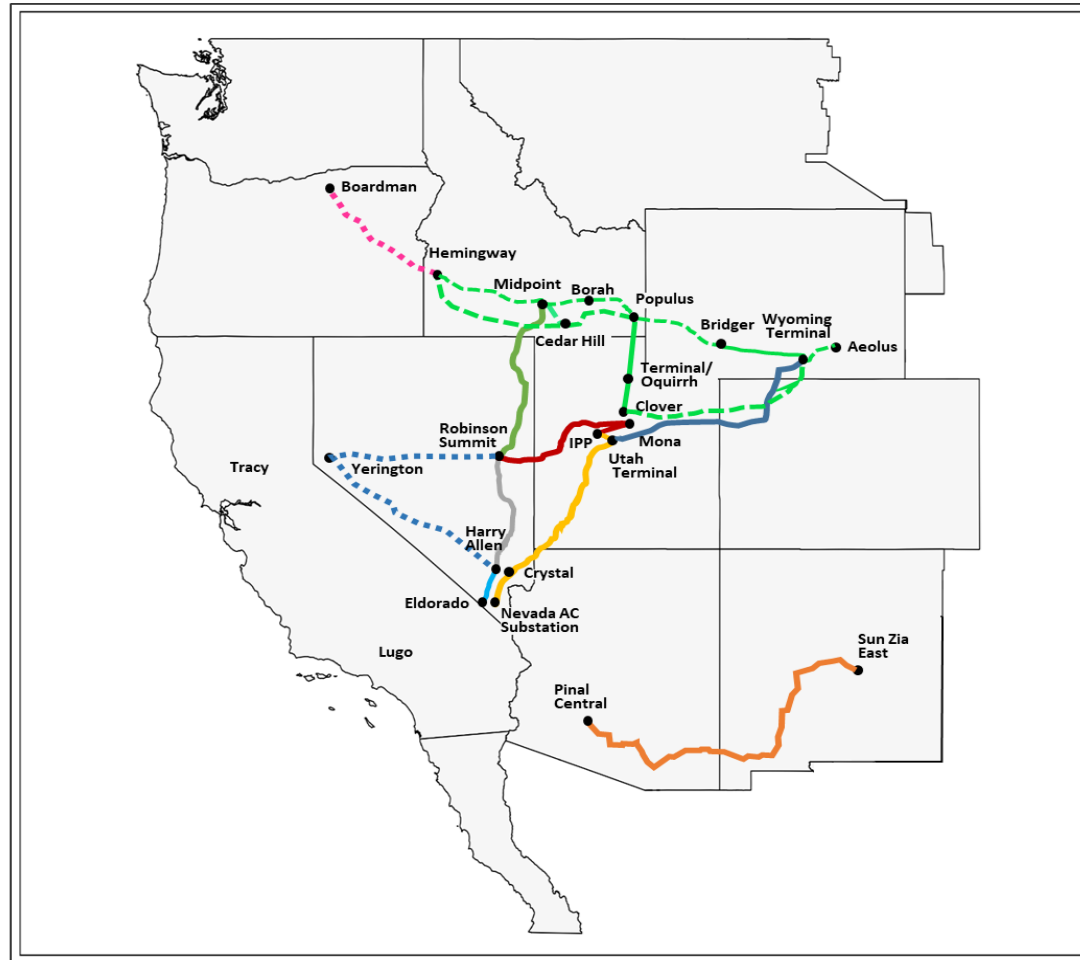

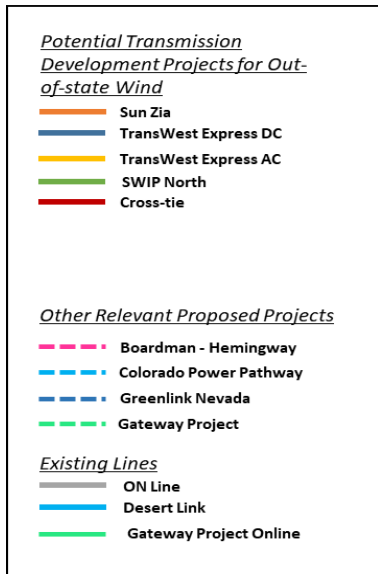

Stakeholder Engagement Objectives

- Engage the industry to gauge interest from load-serving entities (LSEs) in accessing out-of-state wind resources
- Focus on states with capacity such as Idaho, Wyoming, Arizona, and New Mexico
- Extension of the CAISO's 2021-2022 transmission planning cycle
- Request for expressions of interest on two proposals targeting specific states

Out-of-state (OOS) wind resources in the CAISO's 2021-2022 transmission plan

- OOS wind resource scenarios studied under the 2021-2022 transmission plan
 - CPUC IRP base portfolio
 - 1,062 MW of capacity in Wyoming, Idaho, or New Mexico areas
 - 530 MW of capacity in Pacific Northwest on existing transmission
 - CPUC IRP Sensitivity 1 portfolio
 - 1,500 MW of capacity in Wyoming, Idaho
 - 1,500 MW of capacity in New Mexico
 - 1,500 MW of capacity in Pacific Northwest and 500 MW of capacity in New Mexico on existing transmission

Out-of-state Proposed Transmission Projects

Proposed approach by the CAISO

- Running an expression of interest for each of the below proposals:
 - Proposal A: Accessing wind resources specifically located in Idaho through transmission projects, either proposed such as the Southwest Intertie Project - North (SWIP-North) transmission project, or future projects.
 - Proposal B: Accessing wind resources in other neighboring states such as Wyoming, New Mexico, and Arizona through transmission projects, either proposed or future projects.

Next Steps / Process Timelines

Action	Due Date
Release of Issues Paper	June 20, 2022
